PRESENTATION

The global spread of the COVID-19 pandemic and its devastating social economic impact represent a considerable challenge for nation states and international organisations. While the effects of the crisis are global, nation states have acted as primary actors through a wide range of individual decisions. They sought to stop the spread of the virus by radically limiting internal and international travels, suspending economic activity, closing schools and universities, shops and public places and confining persons at home. Many of these drastic limitations to individual freedom of movement and assembly have been taken without cross-border coordination. Transnational problems require transnational solutions and but establishing these been a visibly challenging task for the European Union but also for international and regional organisations in general.

The aim of this summer programme is to address a set of timely questions such as:

- What is the role of regional and international organisations in responding to the COVID-19 crisis as a global challenge?
- How do they assert themselves against nation states surging ahead on their own?
- How do they react to the socio-economic, informational as well as human rights and rule of law challenges within their member states?
- What is their organisational capacity and mandate to (re)act and has there been a change due to the crisis?
- How is international and regional solidarity translated into concrete action?
- How is the COVID-19 pandemic affecting the multilateral system and the balance of power of nation states and regional organisations?

SPEAKERS

Andrew Bradley

Mr. Andrew Bradley was appointed Chief of Staff in the Office of the Secretary-General of the African, Caribbean and Pacific (ACP) Group of States on 1 March 2020. During 2019, he advised Governments and International Organisations on governance, development and democracy. Mr. Bradley headed the Office of the International Institute for Democracy and Electoral Assistance (International IDEA) to the European Union (EU) in Brussels, Belgium from 2012 to 2018.

He was stationed at the Headquarters of International IDEA in Stockholm, Sweden, from 2010 to 2011, where he led the Global Programmes Division of the Institute. A South African native, Mr. Bradley served as the Assistant Secretary-General for Political Affairs and Human Development of the ACP Group of States from 2005 to 2010. Prior to that, he served as a diplomat in South African Embassies and Missions in Canada, Switzerland and Belgium, respectively. In this capacity, he contributed to the negotiations for South Africa's accession to the ACP Group and the Lomé Convention (now Cotonou Agreement), and was a member of the South African Negotiating Team for the South Africa-EU Trade, Development and Cooperation Agreement (TDCA). In service to the ACP Group, Mr. Bradley participated in the first phase (all ACP) of negotiations for ACP-EU Economic Partnership Agreements (EPAs), contributed to the successful 2005 revision of the Cotonou Agreement, and coordinated the 2010 revision of the Agreement for the ACP Secretariat.

In 2019, Mr. Bradley joined the Institut d'études européennes of the Université libre de Bruxelles (IEE-ULB) as a Scientific Collaborator, and the United Nations University Institute on Comparative Regional Integration Studies (UNU-CRIS) as a Research Fellow. Previous professional affiliations include membership of the Results Management Council (RMC) and Consultative Group (GC) of the World Bank's Global Facility for Disaster Reduction and Recovery (GFDRR), Scientific Committee Member of the 2008 International Conference on Migration and Vulnerability of the United Nations University Institute for Environment and Human Security (UNU-EHS) from 2006 to 2008, and a Member of the Friends of the Forum of the United Nations Global Forum on Migration and Development (2008-2010). The new Chief of Staff has authored and contributed to numerous articles and publications. His academic qualifications include graduate and post-graduate degrees and diplomas in Political Sciences, Strategic Studies, International Marketing and International Politics.

SPEAKERS

Frank Mattheis

Frank Mattheis is Post-Doc Research Fellow at IEE-ULB and works on governance structures beyond the nation state, chiefly in relation to regionalism. His publications and projects deal with processes of region-making/unmaking, comparative regionalism as well as North-South and South-South interregionalism. He was previously based at the Centre for the Study of Governance Innovation, University of Pretoria (South Africa) as a senior researcher, where he first coordinated a work package for the ATLANTIC FUTURE FP7-project and later carried out postdoctoral project for the German Academic Exchange Service. Prior, he was senior research fellow at the Centre for Area Studies of the University of Leipzig (Germany), first as part of the research team on “Changing Stateness in Africa”, working on the interplay between Brazilian development models and African partners and later as a postdoctoral researcher for the project “New Regionalisms in a Changing Global Order: Mapping Latin America and Africa”. Frank Mattheis is trained in Global Studies with a M.A. from the Universities of Leipzig and Vienna and a Dr. phil. from the University of Leipzig. His doctoral thesis offers a conceptual framework to overcome Eurocentric theorising and Southern idiosyncrasy in the study of regionalisms. He speaks English, French, German, Italian and Spanish and has spent several fieldwork stays in Central Africa, Southern Africa and South America. He has taught at universities in South America, Africa, Asia and Europe and developed coursework on methods of international studies, on comparative regionalism and on African politics.

Dorit Nitzan

Dr. Dorit Nitzan joined WHO/Europe’s Division of Health Emergencies and Communicable Diseases as Coordinator of Health Emergencies and Programme Manager of Emergency Operations in August 2016. In March 2019, she was appointed Acting Regional Emergency Director, leading the European Region’s WHO Health Emergencies Programme through the full emergency cycle, from prevention and preparedness to response and recovery.

Dr Nitzan joined WHO in 2005. She was Manager of Public Health Services in the South-eastern Europe Health Network and Head of Offices and WHO Representative in Serbia (including Montenegro at that time) until 2012. She then served as WHO Representative in Ukraine until 2016. Prior to this, Dr Nitzan was in senior management positions in the Israeli Ministry of Health. She was also active in the humanitarian nongovernmental organization Physicians for Human Rights. She supported humanitarian operations in Ethiopia and the Middle East with the World Food Programme, and was a nutrition, food safety, public health and emergency response consultant in China, the Republic of Moldova and the Russian Federation. She led health sector activities in disaster preparedness and response missions to Africa, Asia and South America, and served the search and rescue operations response to the 2004 tsunami in Thailand. Dr Nitzan is a paediatrician with a degree from the Sackler Faculty of Medicine at Tel Aviv University in Israel. She completed her residency, fellowship and Master of Public Health degree at the New York-Presbyterian/Columbia University Children’s Hospital in New York City, United States of America. Prior to this, she graduated as a registered dietitian from Hebrew University in Israel.

SPEAKERS

Barbara Pesce-Monteiro

Barbara Pesce-Monteiro is the Director of UNDP's Representation Office in Brussels. She is also the UN Secretary-General's Representative towards the EU and the Belgian authorities.

Mario Telo

Mario Telo is Full Professor of International Relations and EU Studies at the ULB and at the LUISS Guido Carli di Roma Emeritus President of the Institut d'Études Européennes of the ULB Member of the Royal Academy of Science, Belgium.

Tony Venables

Tony Venables is Founder at ECIT Foundation (European citizens' rights, Involvement and Trust). A leading expert on the Institutions and decision-making processes of the European Union and both the opportunities and obstacles for citizens to make their voice heard. Expertise on European citizenship and European civil society. After graduating with a first class degree from Cambridge, he worked first for the Council of Europe in Strasbourg and then after 1973 for the EU Council of Ministers in the department for relations with the European Parliament. Also Secretary General for a time of the staff trade union (Union Syndicale). Then decided not to remain a Eurocrat and from 1978 ran the European consumer lobby BEUC for 20 years, getting results with high profile campaigns. Founded ECAS in 1991 and developed the organisation for the next 22 years as a major support to civil society organisations dealing with Brussels and for citizens to defend their European rights. He left ECAS in December 2013 and started writing a book on European citizenship and doing some consultancy work. The book has since been published in 2016 by Nomos under the title "piecing together Europe's citizenship" and in French by Editions Charles Léopold Mayer under the title "vers un citoyen européen". Neither version is yet really out of date, but I am thinking about producing a new, shorter, more popular version, since there is a gap there when it comes to European citizenship.
